

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

First of all, prayerful thanks to ALLAH our Merciful God who gives me everything I have.

Many thanks to Dr. Ahmed Farah, managing director of ME Agrar company, Germany, for granting me a scholarship from January 2003 to June 2005 to start my doctoral studies at Institute for Zoo and Wildlife research (IZW), Berlin, Germany.

I am very grateful to the Egyptian Government, Ministry of Higher Education for granting me a supportive scholarship from July 2005 to June 2007 to complete my doctoral studies at Free University of Berlin, Germany.

I would like to express my deepest gratitude and thanks to PD Dr. Falko Steinbach for his supervision, kind advice, encouragement, generous help and valuable discussion which made the completion of this work possible.

It is my great pleasure to express my cardinal thanks to staff members of IZW for the fair and honest support they gave to me to perform my doctoral work at IZW.

I would like to thank Prof. H. Stein, Berlin, for providing anti-CD163 (Ber-Mac3), Prof. M. Parawesch, Kiel, for providing anti-CD68 (Ki-M6), Dr. W. Davis, Washington, for providing anti-CD28 mAbs (HB68a and HB65a), Dr. A. Werners, Utrecht and Prof. D. Horohov, Kentucky, for providing cell lines and information and Prof. Horejsi, Prague, for helpful discussion of data. Thanks to Dr. Julia Kydd, AHT, Dr. Julia Flaminio, Cornell University and Prof. Paul Lunn, CSU, for cooperation in subsequent analysis including some two-colour flow cytometry analyses, IHC, and analyzing cell lines. Many thanks to Dr. S. Mauel, Berlin, for providing equine cytokines and kind advice regarding mAbs production and separation of leukocytes. Great thanks to Mrs. Anke Schmidt and Mr. Dietmar Lieckfeldt, IZW, for very kind technical advice they gave to me during sequence analysis of CD28. My greetings to Prof. Grabner and staff members of the Horse clinic, Free University of Berlin, for allowing me to collect blood samples essential for my studies.

I am deeply indebted to each member of my beloved family whose continuous support and encouragement paved my way in life and helped me all the time. I take this opportunity to express the profound gratitude from my deepest heart to my thoughtful mother, my brothers Dr. med. Khaled Mahmoud and Dr. med. Amr Mahmoud, my wife Eman and my daughters Arwa and Aya for their sincere prayers, love, patience and spiritual support.