

What Readers Demand
Market-induced Growth of Content Diversity in the PRC Press

2004

Martin Brendebach

beim Otto-Suhr-Institut für Politische Wissenschaft im Fachbereich Politik- und
Sozialwissenschaften eingereichte Dissertation

Erstgutachter:

Prof. Eberhard Sandschneider (Otto-Suhr-Institut, FB Politik- und Sozialwissenschaften)

Zweitgutachter:

Prof. Erling von Mende (Ostasiatisches Seminar, FB Geschichts- und Kulturwissenschaften)

Datum der Verteidigung: 22.12.2004

Contents

Introduction	1
I. Theory	7
1. China studies: Will China democratize?.....	7
2. Media studies: The media's impact on democratization processes.....	11
2.1. Abundance of case studies - lack of a general theory.....	13
2.2. Gaining ground for a comprehensive framework for comparison.....	16
2.3. Integrating the models: A comprehensive theory.....	22
3. Applying the framework: Media and democracy in China.....	25
3.1. Development.....	26
3.2. International Media.....	27
3.3. Political Control.....	28
3.3.1. The propaganda "system" (xitong): mechanisms of control..	29
3.3.2. Censorship.....	30
3.3.3. Three political functions of the press.....	30
3.3.4. Supervision: A concept in flux.....	32
3.4. Ownership and market forces.....	39
3.4.1. Control through ownership.....	40
3.4.2. New plurality of editors and papers.....	41
3.4.3. Readership demand.....	44
3.5. Journalists.....	48
3.6. Assessing the factors.....	50
3.7. The open question.....	52
4. Summary.....	54
II. Method	55
1. Quantitative Content Analysis.....	55
1.1. The basic idea.....	55
1.2. Problems of Quantitative Content Analysis.....	56
2. Design of the study.....	58
2.1. Sampling.....	59
2.1.1. Newspaper sample.....	59

2.1.2. Sampling the issues.....	63
2.2. Category system.....	64
2.2.1 Reliability.....	64
2.2.2. The idea of the category system.....	65
2.2.3. Topics.....	65
2.2.4. Article direction.....	67
2.2.5. Object of criticism.....	70
2.2.6. Actors.....	71
2.2.7. Regional reference.....	71
2.2.8. International News.....	71
2.2.9. Article size.....	73
3. Summary.....	74
III. Results.....	75
1. Preliminary remarks.....	75
2. Topics.....	76
3. Direction.....	81
3.1 Mean Article Direction.....	81
3.2. Comprehensive topics.....	83
3.3. Critical articles.....	83
3.3.1. Topics.....	83
3.3.2. Targets of criticism.....	85
3.3.3. Actors / Regional reference.....	88
3.4. Affirmative articles.....	89
3.5. Summary.....	89
4. Criticism.....	90
4.1. Average values.....	90
4.2. Comprehensive topics.....	92
4.3. Criticism of party-state representatives.....	93
4.4. Criticism of enterprises.....	96
4.5. Criticism of citizens.....	98
4.6. Summary.....	99
5. Actors.....	99
6. International news / foreign affairs.....	100

6.1. Attention to countries.....	102
6.2 Topics.....	104
6.3. Direction.....	105
6.4. Single countries and topics.....	111
6.4.1. US.....	111
6.4.2. Japan.....	112
6.4.3. Western Europe.....	113
6.4.4. Russia.....	115
6.4.5. Developing countries.....	115
6.5. Summary: Results of international news.....	116
IV. Discussion.....	117
1. National news.....	117
1.1. The political and the non-political.....	117
1.2. Law / justice.....	119
1.3. Accidents.....	123
1.4. Social problems and conflict.....	123
1.5. Economy.....	125
1.6. Society.....	128
1.7. Science / education.....	130
1.8. Health / environment.....	131
1.9. National news: All topics.....	132
2. The image of foreign countries.....	132
2.1. International News reporting and world affairs: 1992 and 2001.....	133
2.2. Politics prevail: Reports about the US and Western Europe.....	135
2.2.1. US.....	135
2.2.2. Western Europe.....	139
2.3. Commercialized news: Japan, Russia, developing countries.....	139
2.3.1. Japan.....	141
2.3.2. Russia.....	143
2.3.3. Developing countries.....	143
2.4. Commercialization of international news: concluding remarks.....	143
3. Newspaper profiles: the emergence of a political spectrum?.....	144

3.1. Social problems and economic issues.....	145
3.2. Law / justice.....	146
3.3. Other topics.....	147
3.4. International news.....	148
3.5. Four types of newspaper profile.....	149
4. Summary.....	152
V. Conclusions	153
References.....	156

Acknowledgements

I would like to thank Prof. Sandschneider for supervising my work; several discussions at the initial phase of the projects have proved very fruitful and helped a lot to get the work in the right track.

I also want to thank Prof. von Mende for taking the burden to read and to comment on the thesis.

The methodological approach owes a lot to Dr. Joachim Trebbe (Department of Media Studies, FU Berlin), who has discussed methodological aspects of the project with me and provided many ideas concerning the design of the study.

I am furthermore very indebted to many helpful minds in China; not only to the media scholars and journalists who helped me to better understand journalistic practice in the PRC, but also to all students of my coding team, who were open-minded enough to engage in a research that sounded a bit weird to some of them at the beginning.

Special thanks go to my family and to my friends, who helped not only in their capacity as proof readers, but who also made things easier at many occasions: Ulrike Herzschuh, Matthias Reuber, Henrik Saalbach, Stephan Schmidt, and last not least Eva Knoll.

I am also grateful for the financial support granted by the Friedrich-Ebert-Foundation (providing a scholarship) and by the DAAD (financing two "field trips").